

Hunters, Run! - "EP2"

Release Date: July 14, 2009

Label: Battle Standard

RIYL: Elvis Costello, Husker Du, Talking Heads, The Beach Boys

Track Listing: 1. If I Had Half a Chance, 2. Simple & Calming

After releasing 2 full length albums in 3 years, New York City's favorite post-pop hellraisers, Hunters, Run! have decided to embark on an ambitious project: releasing a series of four consecutive 7"s, all showcasing the band's new work and the art of up & coming artists.

The first in the series, effectively titled "EP1", was released by Battle Standard Recordings on January 13, 2009. EP1 was originally limited to 200 copies, but after the instant-sell-out, BatStand decided to press another batch, which again, instantly sold out. EP2, the second in the series, showcases the band's fascination with sounds as diverse as Elvis Costello, Husker Du, and The Talking Heads.

A-side "If I Had Half a Chance" is the band's most accessible track to date. Adding a lush arrangement to their signature sound, "Half a Chance" builds to a massive crescendo of guitars, organs, synths and voices. EP2 also includes the first non-Larry Hess penned H,R! song on record. The funky, Afghan Whigs-esque B-side, "Simple & Calming" was written by bassist Dan Fodera.

Each 7" in the series is (supposedly) limited to just 200 physical copies available only to residence of NYC and aficionados of the internet. The stellar art for this release features the high definition drawing of Eric Beltz, who won the 2009 Pulse Award in New York City.
